CISO OT Dinner Discussion

How can we intelligently understand OT risk and attack vectors? Benchmarking on the emerging industrial threat landscape and mitigation strategies

Wednesday 27 March 2019 (17:30-21:30)

The Wolseley's Private Dining Room – The Wolseley, London

You are invited to attend an exclusive private CISO Dinner discussion to benchmark with fellow CISOs and directors of cybersecurity from highly automated industries, including energy, utilities, transport and automotive companies. This invitation, is for 27 March 2019, starting with welcome drinks at 17:30 in the private dining room of The Wolseley.

Hosted by Pulse Conferences, and sponsored by Radiflow, the discussion will enable CISOs to benchmark approaches on the emerging industrial threat landscape and mitigation strategies. How can we intelligently understand OT risk and attack vectors? The discussion will consider experiences of managing and measuring risk and mapping attack vectors to mitigate threats on multiple sites, and from human to machine, machine to human.

Conducted under The Chatham House Rule, this discussion will be co-chaired by a fellow CISO from the industry and a senior strategist from Radiflow. Mr. Clive Room, Director of Events at Pulse Conferences, will be your MC for the evening.

Please see the approximate timings below for this very special private dinner invitation. If you can accept, kindly reply using the details below to confirm that you can attend.

Please R.S.V.P. as soon as you can, and before 15 March 2019. Confirmations will be done on a 'first to confirm' basis.

The Wolseley Private Dining Room has been described as one of the most beautiful and prestigious in London. Discreetly hidden from view with its own private staircase, it nonetheless feels part of the main restaurant. The room is lit by candlelight and the glow from the restaurant in the evening. It is a fitting venue for this discussion, given its history - in 1921 the English architect, William Curtis Green, was commissioned by Wolseley Motors Limited to design a prestigious car showroom at the site of 160 Piccadilly!

It is worth highlighting that there is no product or sales talk at this event, it is hosted by the independent voice of Pulse Conferences. These dinners are helpful in bringing the security communities together to benchmark security priorities.

Many thanks for considering this invitation and we hope to welcome you to the Pulse CISO community.

We look forward to hearing from you.

Yours sincerely,
Team Pulse
