

Physical Security for Workplace and Travel

PHYSICAL

Designed for

- CSOs and teams working in corporate security, executive/physical security
- CROs, Board Directors and Senior Managers

Benefits of attending

- How to maximise your leadership abilities
- Apply leadership during incidents and crises
- Adapt an op an “all risks” approach to add value
- Develop new skills and knowledge for corporate and government personnel that lead and manage crises response teams at all levels and individuals that may be exposed to the risk of kidnap
- Learn survival strategies for crises response management teams and kidnapped individuals, how to reduce the likelihood of kidnap, personal security and observation skills, travel planning and intelligence and escape techniques.

Learning Objectives

- Reduce likelihood of kidnap through planning, intelligence, personal security and observation skills
- The use of escape equipment in threat situations
- Kidnap outcomes - the return to normalcy
- Build global networks with law enforcement and independent contacts
- Source information and intelligence gathering
- Practical application on how security is compromised by human nature
- Innovative ways to test vulnerabilities in your travel risk plans

How you will learn

Three modules will teach through ‘live’ scenario planning and case studies through the medium of battlefield tours, role plays and management exercises. Individual personal review of skills development. Softcopy course take-aways.

Module 1: Leadership perspectives

Module 2: Travel security strategies and techniques – kidnap and ransom

Module 3: Developing an international intelligence network

Programme Leader

Robert Shaw - is a security, intelligence and EOD executive with a UK Military background. He has broad strategic and operational experience and has advised senior staff, diplomats and government officials on aspects of security, intelligence, threat analysis, crises management, and resilience strategies. He has been the UN Security and EOD Advisor; Liaison officer for the UNMAS and UNOPS and has experience with NATO, the GCC, African Union, OSCE, EUPOL, FCO and others. Robert is a respected expert, has specialist research background on suicide bombing and has provided thematic briefs on worldwide security issues relevant to UNMAS/UNOPS missions.

Overview

Designed to develop new skills and knowledge for corporate and government personnel security and how to lead and manage crisis response teams at all levels – both in the regular workplace and including individuals that may be exposed to the risk of kidnap.

Communicate and advise more effectively - Board directors and staff

Improve your performance, profile and reputation as a CSO

Improve your capacity to plan, test and direct

Dates and Cities

13-15 May 2019	London
3-5 June 2019	Amsterdam
1-3 July 2019	Zurich
5-7 Aug 2019	London
2-4 Sept 2019	Dubai
7-9 Oct 2019	Johannesburg
10-12 Dec 2019	London

This course can be run as an In-house or Bespoke Programme

Faisal Malik
+44 (0)20 7936 8987
faisal.malik@pulseconferences.com

*Connecting minds, assuring the future:
Education that builds business resilience and professional skills*

www.pulseeducate.com